Alaska Railroad Tour Lantern Slide Collection, 1923. Alaska State Library. This collection of 85 colored lantern slides advertised the Alaska Railroad's Tour #2 in the first year of operation for the Alaska Railroad in 1923. The slides are imprinted with "Alaska Railroad, Washington D.C." The tour began at the Alaska Steamship pier in Seattle and continued by steamship up through the Inside Passage to Seward where the passengers boarded the train. The images start at Seward and show the scenic views along the tour as the train heads to Fairbanks and then by automobile to Valdez. Tour #2 covered 4,402 miles in 22 days, and cost $240.65. The slides advertised the scenic beauty of Alaska and activities of Alaskans living along the route.

Trail Glacier and lateral moraine, Mile 44

Frank Jay Haynes (1853-1921) made a tremendous record of Yellowstone Park in the 1880s returning often through the early 20th Century. Additionally, he operated successful portrait studios from the 1870s on. He served as the Official Photographer of the Northern Pacific Railroad, making an extensive documentation of their line including locations, equipment and the territories around them. He also recorded the same for the Canadian Pacific Railroad. In 1884 he became the Official Photographer of Yellowstone National Park with a studio in Mammoth Hot Springs. During his long career he worked in or held studios in Ann Arbor, Michigan; Wisconsin; Moorehead, Minnesota; Yellowstone Park; and ultimately St. Paul in 1889. In the late 1880's he operated his own photographic railroad car gallery called "Haynes Studio." In 1892, he and his brother, Fred E. Haynes dissolved their partnership with Frank continuing the business and Fred moving to Jacoby Studio. His photographs are featured in many publications about Yellowstone and other western locations including Canada and Alaska.

Magic lantern Alive and Well

Last month we had a note about a statement from The National Museum of Health and Medicine about another dead technology.

The Magic Lantern.

Coming next month there will be a paper from students of the Communications department at Concordia University in Montreal about their findings of the dead technology.

E-mail me today and let me know about the shows and presentations you have given, gone to, or will be giving for the year 2010. Please include any show even if only given to family and friends. Audience size does not matter. What we are looking for is how often the lantern is alive and well and being used to educate and entertain today.

Please include the date and location of the show. Next month along with the paper from the Montreal students there will be a list of the shows by the society members.

Some more information about Song Slide Makers

The slide makers John Duer Scott and Edward Van Altena formed a company together in 1904. Van Altena was the photographer, Scott the colourist. They produced a lot of sing along slides, with hand coloured, photographic montage effects, usually sold in sets of 16, including title and chorus. (Sing along slides are

More From the Members

From: Tom Rall

Also from the small world category: While exhibiting at the NSA trade show in Sandusky, Ohio, last weekend, I had Phyllis, a 3-D photographer, stop by to say that she had just seen the magic lantern show at the Civil War re-enactment she had photographed recently; and another guy stop by and remark that he had picked up our MLS flier at a flea market in Washington, DC, last month. Plus I sold a bunch of slides of Japan to a Yokohoma native writing a book on Japanese stereo. And I handled a query, via Dick Moore, from Lester Smith in the UK, who wanted me to say hello to one of their MLS members, whom I'd just met.

Unusual Slide

Nineteenth century physics instructors used slide projectors for demonstrations. This is an articulated steam engine model which fits into the projection gate of a slide projector. It is at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Connecticut.

Group NW Events

John Potter gave Show July 17 at the Heritage Quest Library in Sumner, WA.

This is a private genealogical library, that usually has special programs associated with genealogy. John presented mostly historical slides of the area as well as some other slides.

From John,

The show went very well. For this group it is a good turnout. For some of their latest events, they have had zero to just a few. When several people came in later to use the museum, several people said that you missed a good show.

Subject: Brenert Hi-Lighter Lighting Fixture

Hi Brian - I'll forward this on and see if any of our members have information that would be of help. Sounds all very interesting but as you note, a bit out of most of our member's area of expertise. But who knows what might surface.

Comments: Just bought two of these fixtures out of an antique shop over the weekend. I have a 60+ museum on stage lighting going, plus over 200 antique fixtures experience at this point in going back to 1916 Chicago Stage Lighting, Kliegl and Major. While I note the existence of this company in the 1920's thru the 1950's, I also note of them in the 1950's that they were getting into stage lighting at that point.

The 5" Plano Convex fixtures I bought are very much early in design by way of cast aluminum front and rear plates, 1/4" stud science experiment like reflector mounts, P-28s medium screw lamp holders - this on the fixture rated for only 250w as opposed to 400w as would be available at the time etc. Lots of details in having studied old lights.

In the past, I will have thought hex screws and 4-40 screws as found on this fixture would denote a younger fixture - this even if unique hexagon screw base without even brand would make it older. Very confusing to me. 5" lens I see the lamp retaining clips to but lacking the lens or even gel frame or other assemblies to on it.

Also lacking the reflector. I realize that with PC fixtures both lens and reflector were amongst many options and have a lot of fixtures including a Bantam Super spot that didn't come with in finding.

Anyway, given the old darker green as it were Olive Drab color of the fixture, I'm looking for history on this fixture so as to better present in the lighting museum.

It I think was a wall bracket type of fixture in one having a 1/4-20 swivel mount and no side or yoke mounting. First fixture for me in fact that you access the lamp from the side. Got one from top access I don't know the brand of, and many from the front.

Any help or in contacting me off line you can do in photos? This is for research purposes in mounting this fixture amongst many others in a museum and thanks.

Don,
I'm forwarding your query to members of two magic lantern societies, including newsletter and web masters.

Mr Tom Rall

I talked to you at the NSA trade fair about my Ives Lantern Kromskop and my desire to find a slide for it.

You indicated that you could possibly put me in touch with someone who might have one. I would appreciate any help you can provide in directing me to such a slide.

Based on measuring the projector the slide will be about 9 1/8 " wide and around 3 or 3 1/2" high with three more or less identical images side by side on the slide

Thanks for any assistance you can provide in this project.

Antique c. 1910 group of young men playing cards w cigars magic lantern glass slide

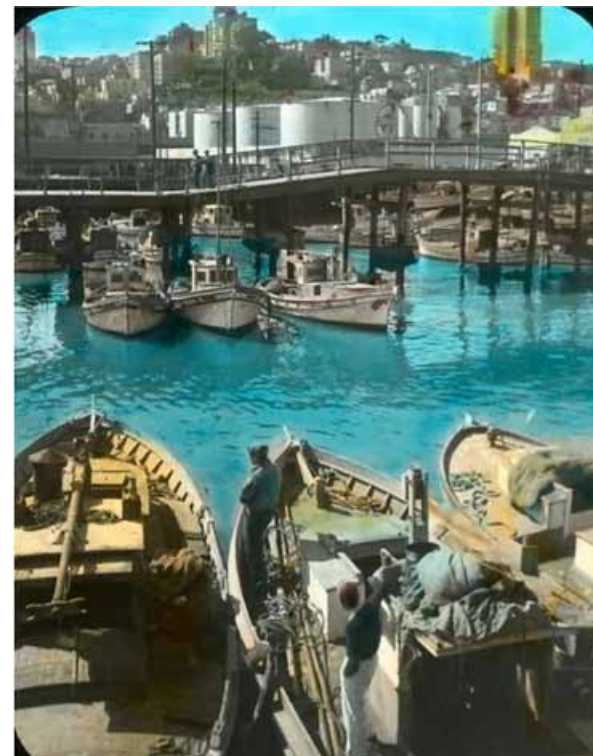

These slides are in great shape. They all measure about 3 1/4 x 4 inches. The edges show some wear and a few small glass chips but all in all really a fantastic image.

I had figured out that this was a collection of original glass slides that were made of some sort of family or company outing. One of the slides was just of the american flag that was at the club where this outing took place. Fortunately, I could count the stars and it was a 46 star flag. That encompasses the years of 1908-1912 so we can date these glass slides to within that 4 year window. That makes these very early golf and tennis images. And the slides are in excellent shape with the original images being crisp and clear. Great as original slides or would make incredible photograph prints. I have searched the internet for anything comparable. Other slides are available but none of sports like these-- I think these are incredibly rare--

Unusual composition with the light gray rectangle hole in the center of the image.
